Adapted from James Heller's book, directed by Mike Nichols. Catch-22 is a parody of a "military mentality" and of a bureaucratic society in general. Yossarian, a bombardier in World War II, tries desperately to escape the insanity of the war. Yossarian learns that even a mental breakdown is no release; Doc Daneeka explains the Army Air Corps "Catch-22": An airman "would be crazy to fly more missions and sane if he didn't, but if he was sane he'd have to fly them. If he flew them he was crazy and didn't have to; but if he didn't, he was sane and had to."

"Who, specifically, do you think is trying to murder you?"

"Every one of them," Yossarian told him.

"Every one of whom?"

"Every one of whom do you think?" Yossarian replied.

"I haven't any idea."

"Then how do you know they aren't?" Yossarian said.

Hilarious and tragic, at the heart of Catch-22 is a savage indictment of twentieth century madness, and a desire of the ordinary man to survive it.

"Blessedly, monstrosly, bloatedly, cynically funny and fantastically unique. No one has ever written a book like this."

~ Financial Times review of Joseph Heller's book

"Catch-22 is a must-see, particularly in today's world with its warped values of profiteering, corruption, abuse of power, lying, cheating and claims of being guided by 'higher' forces. Get it, see it, see it. I can understand why it wasn't an Oscar candidate, because that would have required large audiences of some sophistication, and where would you get that in the US (especially today)?" Australian reviewer

Major Sanderson: "You have a morbid aversion to dying. You probably resent the fact that you're at war and might get your head blown off any second."

Yossarian: "I more than resent it, sir. I'm absolutely incensed."
