Let's Make Money

[110 min]

S Most of us don't know where our money is. One thing is Y for certain, it's is not in the bank we entrusted it to.

Let's Make Money, is an incredible odyssey that tracks N our money through the worldwide finance system. It O exposes the seamy underside of investment where the P gain of the rich comes as the expense of everyone
S else; it graphically shows the human cost of high I finance for its many victims around the globe.

"In settings ranging from India to Austria, from Burkina S Faso to Washington, D.C., the legacies of decades of I relaxed credit, deregulation of markets, and S privatization of public facilities are illustrated by S concrete examples so bizarre, outsized, and chilling
S that you'd expect to find them in a science-fiction movie S rather than a documentary. The testimonies of S economic theorists, proponents of offshore tax havens, S and even one 'economic hit man' combine to create a S portrait of high stakes and shortsightedness, with war, S mass migration, and ecological disaster as only a few S of the downsides." ~Sundance Film Festival Program

"It's estimated that currently 11.5 trillion dollars of private wealth is held offshore, managed from offshore, and avoids tax from offshore."
~John Christensen

"The best time to buy is when there is blood on the streets." ~Dr. Mark Mobius

"These capitalists generally act harmoniously and in concert, to fleece the people."
~Abraham Lincoln

"It is a film of overwhelming power.
It resembles an art film such as Koyaanisqatsi, Godfrey Reggio's haunting, wordless indictment of the frenzy of modern life." ~Christopher Caldwell, Financial Times

"Deprive a capitalist of his God-given right to lie and cheat and steal, and the poor sap stands a better than even chance of becoming one of the abominable wards of the state."
~Lewis H. Lapham
