How to Change the World

[112 min]

S In 1971 a small group of activists set sail from Vancouver, Canada in an old fishing boat. Their mission was to stop Nixon's atomic test bomb in Amchitka, Alaska. Chronicling this untold story at the birth of the modern environmental movement and with access to dramatic archive footage unseen for over 40 years, the film centres on eco-hero Robert Hunter and his part in the creation of the global organization we now know as Greenpeace.

O Alongside a group of like-minded and idealistic young friends in the '70s, Hunter would be instrumental in altering the way we look at the world and our place within it. These early pioneers captured their daring and sometimes jaw-dropping actions on film and from this director Jerry Rothwell has made a thrilling, sometimes terrifying film. A prizewinner at the Sundance Film Festival, it is one of those must-see documentaries.

*Courage takes on many shapes and sizes – but it always takes a step outside of your comfort zone.
If you think of it, go out and do it*

Hunter's 5 rules of engagement:

- 1) Plant Mind Bombs
- 2) Put Your Body Where Your Mouth Is
- 3) Fear Success
- 4) The Revolution Will Not Be Organized
- 5) Let the Power Go

"The weakest link is always us. ...Activism is messy."

"Any force strong enough to truly change the world won't be harnessed or held by a few. It has to be unleashed..."

"If we wait for the meek to inherit the earth, there won't be anything left to inherit..."

"It's no longer enough to be a decent person. True enlightened activism is the only thing that can save humanity from itself."
~Joss Whedon

"To avoid criticism, do nothing, say nothing, be nothing."
~Elbert Hubbard
